Survey of Likely Voters and Strategy Discussion

PSB conducted 1157 online interviews of likely UK voters on July 12, 2005. The margin of error is +/- 2.88% for the overall audience, higher for subgroups.

Clearly the public believes that the PM and the government are handling the terrorist bombing well and focusing on the right issues – the evil ideology that is being spread and the need to toughen anti-terrorism laws.

Support for the PM is up – and has been improving over the days.

Support for reaction to the terrorist bombing is strong.

Evil ideology and radical clerics take the most blame.

Support for ID cards has increased.

Approval of Iraq war has increased significantly.

Women are now especially concerned about terrorism.

Immigration and crime are up as issues.

But of course this is all an uncertain situation in which anything can happen.

The public likes Bush even less after the G8, and they see Blair as having gotten tougher on EU more so than tougher on Bush.

But with aid to Africa, the Olympics, and the handling of the bombing, confidence in leadership is growing as reflected in the poll, but the voters remain uncertain about the definition and objectives of the term, which is a key objective of the Conference, though it is too far out to know what the public mood will be then.
